RALLY BOOK READING ASSIGNMENT: "RESCUING OUR DOCUMENTS OF FREEDOM."

Rescuing Our Documents of Freedom

By Sharlene P. Nelson

- 1 In the summer of 1814, Stephen Pleasonton served as a senior clerk for Secretary of State James Monroe. Pleasonton worked with other clerks in the State Department offices in Washington City, the nation's young capital. Eight thousand people lived in the city where new government buildings stood along dirt streets.
- 2 These were the final days of the War of 1812, when United States soldiers and sailors defended the nation against the British. Some people thought the British might attack Washington. Others thought the city was safe, including Secretary of War John Armstrong. He declared, "... they certainly will not come here! What the devil will they do here?" The British, however, intended to capture Washington. Admiral George Cockburn said that taking a country's capital is "always so great a blow to the government of a country."
- 3 Messages began arriving in Washington saying that the British were coming. James Monroe volunteered to scout their movement. He mounted his horse and rode nearly fifty miles southeast of the city. On Saturday, August 20, Monroe spied the British commanded by Admiral Cockburn. He watched their ships sailing up the Patuxent River in Maryland and their troops marching overland toward Washington.
- 4 Monroe quickly scribbled a note to Pleasonton and gave it to a messenger. As the messenger rode into Washington, dust clouds filled the hot, humid air. Horses and oxen pulled wagons filled

Protecting the Past

Every year more than a million people visit the National Archives in Washington, D.C. They come to see the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution. Signed more than two hundred years ago, the documents are sealed behind thick glass, where visitors can see the faded signatures of our Founding Fathers. After the documents were signed, the U.S. Congress placed them in the care of the State Department.

with the household goods of people fleeing the city. The messenger hurried through the crowd, found Pleasonton, and gave him the note.

5 Pleasonton read Monroe's note. It ordered him to find a safe place for the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. "I proceeded to purchase coarse linen and cause it to be made into bags of convenient size," Pleasonton later wrote. He, with the other clerks, began placing department records, George Washington's letters, the Declaration of Independence, and the Constitution in the linen bags. As they worked, Secretary of War John Armstrong walked by on the way to his office.

6 His voice rising in anger, Armstrong told Pleasonton he was foolish. Armstrong still believed the British would not attack Washington. "I replied that we were under a different belief," wrote Pleasonton, "... it was the part of prudence to preserve the valuable papers of the Revolutionary Government." He finished packing, then loaded the valuable cargo onto carts.

7 Pleasonton and other clerks drove the horse-drawn carts across a Potomac River bridge and continued upriver a few miles to an abandoned mill. Pleasonton hid the linen bags in the mill. Then he changed his mind. He noticed that the mill was near a foundry where cannons were made. He was afraid that the British might find the foundry and destroy it, the mill, and the valuable documents.

8 The next day, Pleasonton obtained wagons from nearby farmers. After loading the linen bags into the wagons, he and the men drove thirty-five miles to Leesburg, Virginia. They arrived on the evening of August 24. Pleasonton found an empty house, stored the documents, locked the doors, and gave the key to the sheriff. Exhausted, Pleasonton checked into a hotel. That night while he slept, Leesburg townspeople watched a distant, bright glow in the night sky. The British had set fire to Washington. Homes and government buildings were burned, including the State Department offices.

The Constitution

The thirteen American colonies wanted to be free and independent of Great Britain. In 1776, representatives from the colonies signed the Declaration of Independence declaring their freedom. After winning freedom in the American Revolution, representatives created and signed the U.S. Constitution. In 1789, the Constitution became the law for the new nation of the United States of America.

9 A month later, the United States defeated the British at Baltimore, Maryland. People began returning to Washington to rebuild the city. The Declaration of Independence and the Constitution were also returned to the capital.

10 In 1820, Stephen Pleasonton was appointed superintendent of the nation's lighthouse establishment, a position he held for thirty-two years. Many remember him as the superintendent who established more than 260 U.S. lighthouses. Few remember him as the clerk who rescued our documents of freedom.

Arlington

by Trace Adkins

I never thought that this is where I'd settle down,
I thought I'd die an old man back in my hometown,
They gave me this plot of land,
me and some other men,
for a job well done.

There's a big white house sits on a hill just up the road.
The man inside he cried the day they brought me home,
They folded up a flag,
and told my mom and dad,
'We're proud of your son'.

And I'm proud to be on this peaceful piece of property,
I'm on sacred ground and I'm in the best of company,
I'm thankful for those thankful for the things I've done,
I can rest in peace,
I'm one of the chosen ones,
I made it to Arlington.

Analysis of 'Arlington'

After reading the first stanza, what can you infer about the narrator?

What is the 'big white house on a hill'?

Who is 'the man inside'?

What evidence in the second stanza shows that the narrator died young?

Find 2 examples of alliteration in the third stanza.

I remember Daddy brought me here when I was eight,
We searched all day to find out where my granddad lay,
And when we finally found that cross,
He said, 'Son this is what it cost,
to keep us free'.

Now here I am a thousand stones away from him,
He recognized me on the first day I came in,
And it gave me a chill,
when he clicked his heels,
and saluted me.

And I'm proud to be on this peaceful piece of property,
I'm on sacred ground and I'm in the best of company,
I'm thankful for those thankful for the things I've done,
I can rest in peace,
I'm one of the chosen ones,
I made it to Arlington.

And every time I hear twenty-one guns,
I know they brought another hero home, to us.
We're thankful for those thankful for the things
we've done,
We can rest in peace, 'cause we were the chosen ones,
We made it to Arlington,
yea, dust to dust
Don't cry for us,
we made it to Arlington.

Did the narrator's grandfather also die in war? How do you know?

The narrator says he is a "thousand stones away from" his grandfather. What do those thousand stones symbolize, or represent?

The narrator states "I'm in the best of company." What does this mean?

The narrator repeats "I made it to Arlington." What does this tell you about burials in Arlington Cemetery?
